

The microchips should be implanted just under the skin on the right side of the base of the tail (with the animal facing away from you)

Or at the base of either ear

If you chose to implant the microchip at the base of an ear, you must identify the microchip's location on the animal's application for registration